

VECTOR: Capture for Returns

A VECTOR RETURNS SOLUTION

USE CAPTURE FOR RETURNS – THE IMAGE CAPTURE SOFTWARE WITH TRANSPORT TRANSPARENCY

The freedom to choose alternative sorting hardware is a key feature of Capture for Returns. That's what we mean by Transport Transparency — complete flexibility in machine selection and scheduling.

Whether you're running NCR 7700-series or IBM XP transports, Capture for Returns lets you fully exploit their existing capabilities. You can probably use idle hardware to run image capture of return items.

And Capture for Returns is fast and easy to get started with: a simple matter of mounting a camera on the transport, loading some software, and you're ready to start capturing.

A “FRONT-END” CAPTURE SYSTEM FOR VECTOR: FIVE

Capture for Returns is a true front-end capture system for VECTOR: Five, capable of both MICR capture and image capture. With Capture for Returns, images are created, a return reason and number of times returned are attached to each item right on the front end. It's easy to see how this arrangement is much more productive for your bank.

HERE'S HOW THE PROCESS WORKS FOR INCOMING ITEMS:

- MICR and image capture is performed in conjunction with NCR 7700-series transports or IBM XP transports.

- A key from image for each item includes a return reason and the correct MICR data.
- In Capture for Returns' role as a transmit facility, the file is transferred to Predecision for VECTOR: Five.

SIMPLIFY, SIMPLIFY

Does the idea of working with fewer software vendors appeal to you? Then by all means investigate Capture for Returns. It is designed to work seamlessly with, and "feed" other VECTOR products such as VECTOR: Five and Predecision for VECTOR: Five. Capture for Returns places exception items in particular "pockets" (i.e., closed account, NSF, etc.) which are determined by VECTOR: Five or Predecision for VECTOR: Five. From dealing with incoming items to power encoding outgoing returns, the VECTOR products work together to create an efficient, productive process.
